Ormara Beach in Pakistan is full of untapped treasures, away from the hustle and bustle of city lives. These untouched places not only allow you to connect with yourself on a meditative level, but also gives you opportunities to discover the hidden majesty that Pakistan has to offer. Once these places are discovered by the world, neither you nor they will remain the same.

If gorgeous blue seas, untouched shores and native sea food is the inspiration for your next weekend getaway, look no further than the port city in Baluchistan called Ormara. Ormara beach was one of the pit stop for Alexander the great, and one of his generals died here, named ormuz, thus the name Ormara. Situated about 250 Km from Karachi this Naval Base is paradise.

With a beautiful sunset at the beach, live barbecue and music while you roast marshmallows beside the bonfire sitting under the beautiful starry sky, we bring you a weekend trip to Ormara. A two-day trip filled with exciting activities that will turn your experience into an unforgettable one.
