A fire suppression system is used to suppress the fire. It is an important fire fighting equipment. A fire suppression system is also used to control the fire from spreading over a large area. A fire sprinkler system gets an activation signal from a heat or smoke detector. Instead of water, it uses dry chemicals, foam, and various gases as a fire extinguishing agent. Fire suppression system includes many protecting components such as detectors, alarm, and extinguishing agent. The fire suppression system uses chemical, foam, and other types of gases as an extinguishing agent. It does not use water as an extinguishing agent because water can cause damage to some electronic equipment. Some facilities like the manufacturer of semiconductors or businesses that deal with oil and gas require a fire suppression system for extinguishing the fire.
