For your understanding, a business plan is a strategy or road map for business's future which evaluates and describes the objectives, structure, product and service offerings, financial forecasts, etc. of the business to the external and internal users.

It usually has three basic purposes:

1. Communication
2. Management
3. Planning

Communication

A business plan might be used as a communication tool to attract investment capital, to the security of loans, and to encourage employees in the achievement of organizational goals. In addition, it appears helpful in attracting strategic business partnerships.

ECG supports you in the establishment of a comprehensive business plan that provides useful information to the users regarding your business's strategic direction and future policies and operations.

Management

The business plan is also a management tool that helps with tracking, monitoring and evaluating the progress of your business. It is often used for establishing the turning points of business, enabling you to determine the rate of your progress, and acts as a feedback mechanism.

ECG can entertain you with guidance in managing and updating your business plan as per changes occurred in global market and local and international business sectors.

Planning

As a planning tool, a business plan is a route to be followed in order to fulfill the requirements of achievement of your business's strategic objectives and its overall mission. In addition, sharing the business plan at different levels of an organization can generate a better understanding of organizational goals and objectives.

ECG does consider the planning phase as an important step in the Business Planning process and delivers valuable perception to you that enables your business to run on a successful path. For more information
